QOZQO Alpacas

Welcome to QOZQO Alpacas

Qozqo (pronounced Koz-Ko) is the Spanish spelling of Cusco, the awe inspiring city that was the capital of the Inca Empire.

Alpacas

Qozqo Alpaca is a world class Alpaca stud situated in the Southern Tablelands just south of the Australian Capital Territory, specialising in breeding fine, dense, coloured huacayas and suris. Use of carefully selected superior genetics has produced animals with fine, soft, white, cream, apricot, fawn, grey and black fleeces with beautiful handle and lustre.

About John and Val

John and I live at Williamsdale just south of Canberra, and had been breeding quality angora goats for 23 years. In 2004 we bought our first alpacas to use as guard animals in an effort to keep the foxes at bay and save our kid goats. Within a few months we had fallen in love with these inquisitive, quiet, environmentally friendly animals and now are running over 200 alpacas.

The first decision we made was to breed 'grey' alpacas and we carefully selected our initial purchases based on grey genetics in their breeding. The beautiful creams and apricot colours soon took our fancy as well, and we added light fawn and suri genetics to our herd. Light fawn is a poor descriptor for the wonderful colour range from cream and warm light fawn, to apricot and almost pink or mushroom colour.

250 cria (babies) later, we are still totally smitten with these quiet, intelligent animals who come running to check what we are doing and make sure we are doing it right. We are delighted that our choice of carefully selected genetics is producing high quality, fine, lustrous coloured fleeces in the colours we, and others, are looking for and has resulted in so much success in the show ring.
